

ABSTRACT

A web data conferencing system is coupled to a video server to provide the output video signal of the video server as the video portion of the web conference. The video server is configured to receive video signals from multiple sources and to interactively provide the video signals as an output signal to the web conference.